Dear Dr. Zhao,

On behalf of the Department of Sociology and the Confucius Institute at the University of Memphis, I would like to extend my sincere invitation to you as a Visiting Research Faculty from August 1, 2018 to July 31, 2019.

For the duration of your appointment at our University, we will be able to provide you with a workspace, computer account, and a University of Memphis ID (with library privileges).

We understand that you are interested in studying the social and cultural changes driven by environment changes as well as community-based development projects in China. In particular, you will continue your research that examines how the newly-built national parks have shaped affected migrants' life chances such as their financial status, education, health, and cultural values. In our department, we are proud to boast a significant number of faculty and students who have been conducting excellent empirical studies regarding global social and cultural change.

During your stay in Memphis, we expect that you will contribute to our teaching and research activities in your research areas. You are expected to work with our faculty and students in various ways including, but not limited to, giving lectures on "Development, Environmental Change, and Social-Cultural Consequences in China."

Faculty members in our department and the Confucius Institute are willing to cooperate with you and provide opportunities for the future collaborative research projects.

We understand that, during your stay in the United States, Hubei University of Economics will provide you with a research fund of $8,065 (50000 renminbi) and a 12-month stipend of $1,130 (7000 renminbi) per month and cover your health insurance, international transportation, and other costs of living.

If there is any assistance I may provide, please do not hesitate to write to me. We look forward to seeing you soon.

Yours sincerely,

Dr. Gretchen Peterson
